

WIFE BRINGS HUBBY TO HIS KNEES IN MORALS COURT

Andrew Segel of 2245 Wabash av. made a splash in his matrimonial puddle Saturday night. Andy went out for a good time. During the evening he was arrested in the company of six women with morals court records.

He called up a friend, was bailed out and got home Sunday morning, telling his wife he had been arrested in a dance hall fight. But—

Mrs. Segel suspected him and went early today to the morals court and sat in the back row, where he could not see her.

Segel's case was called and the six women with him were fined. Then City Prosecutor F. C. Souhrada turned to him.

"Are you married?" he asked.

"No," Segel answered.

"Three and no costs," said Judge Goodnow, and Andy started for the door.

Just then Mrs. Segel appeared in the court.

Smack! His wife hit him in the face. Then she fired a volley into his ribs and kicked him on the shins.

Segel was haled before Judge Goodnow again.

"You lied to me," said the judge. "Two hundred and costs. That will be six months in the Bridewell."

Then Mrs. Segel began crying.

"Don't fine him, judge. Don't send him away. He's all I have and he has always treated me well," she sobbed. "Besides I would have to go to work." She held his hand and cried. Then she turned on him fiercely.

"Get down on your knees and beg forgiveness," she cried. "Get down before the whole court and promise never to do it again."

And Segel knelt before her with his head bent.

"I promise," he said quietly and the turbulent morals court was still.

"Just a minute before you arise," said Prosecutor Souhrada. "Promise this: No more women. You will bring home your pay envelope unopened, stay at home with your wife every night, and do what she says."

"I promise," said Segel again.

"Then go and be good to her. If she even comes in here again with a tale about you I'll trim you good," said Judge Goodnow. "Now go."

Segel arose and the pair left the courtroom holding each other tightly.

ARREST NEW AURORA SUSPECT

Local police today arrested a second suspect in connection with the mysterious murder of Emma Peterson at Aurora last Thursday. The man refused to give his name. He is an Austrian.

His description is said to tally with that of the man seen running from where Miss Peterson's body was found. In his sleeve was a piece of gaspipe. There was another in his pocket. He steadfastly denied knowledge of the Peterson murder.

TURN DOWN COOPERS' UNION

Jaques Manufacturing Co. of Chicago, manufacturers of K. C. baking powder, has refused to agree to any settlement with local union No. 15 of Coopers' International Union and cooperation of that firm is now being done by non-union men. Matter is receiving attention of local central body and Union Label league.

RIGHT YOU ARE, BEATRICE

New Vory, March 1. — "If every woman would do as I have done there would be fewer men like this on Broadway," said Miss Beatrice Waldeck, a singer, after she had knocked down a man who annoyed her.

HERE'S A NEW WAY

New York, March 1. — "We're strangers and are afraid of losing our money," said two men to Francesco Casipere, a farmer. "So am I," returned Casipere, pulling out $200. A moment later he was chasing his $200 up the street.
